A while back, an avid motorcyclist stumbled across a strange looking motorbike that had been left in the graveyard of some old factory somewhere. As he approached the bike, he was shocked to find out that it actually ran! After enlisting help from some friends, they removed all the rusty metal parts and carefully rebuilt this machine with care, ensuring to preserve the original unique design. After many teething troubles with its primitive technology, it eventually started working perfectly. To make sure nobody else ever tries to destroy this beauty again they decided to release their modified version on the internet for everyone to enjoy. Now, after months of meticulous work, they have finally finished their project and brought you the most beautiful monster on the road today...
